Serengeti National Park is undoubtedly the most famous wildlife sanctuary in the world, unequalled for its great concentration of plains game. It lies between the shores of Lake Victoria in the east and the Kenyan border to the northwest. In addition to its vast herds of wildebeest, zebra, Thomson's gazelle and other plains game, the Serengeti is renowned for its lion and other predators, including wild dog, spotted hyena and jackal. Leopard may often be seen along the Seronera River. The wealth of bird life is of special interest. During May and June, or sometimes earlier, the famous Serengeti migration begins, as nearly two million wildebeest and a quarter million zebra move toward the Masai Mara to the northwest.

The Zanzibar archipelago consists of four main islands. Unguja is the largest followed by Pemba then Mafia. The fourth and smallest is a coral island that serves as an essential breeding ground for seabirds. Several other smaller islets surround these main islands. Collectively, this band of islands have been branded "the spice Islands" owing to the large number of aromatic plants that grow on this archipelago.
